The Washington College experience has left its mark on each of us . . . tempered our individual characters, broadened our vistas, altered our perspectives. Chestertown, itself, unavoidably provides us with an unusual perspective of life. Colonial structures, weathered yet elegant, are hallmarks of other conflicts and achievements. Yet Washington College is not just tradition. It is a portent in a town where shopkeepers not only know your name and preferences, but being "at the college" assures credit and implies trust.

Mentally, we have been enlivened by exposure to the spectrum of academia where the tradition of liberal arts continues to exist. We are not confronted by technicalities nor are we rushed into decisions. The pace is slow but purposeful. Regulation is negligible, but we are challenged . . . however quietly . . . to discover and express what we have learned to be true.

Learning is not limited to the classroom. The myriad of students—their characters, their experience and talent, their attitudes—is often an uncredited source of exposure. An important tolerance towards the personalities of others is developed for self preservation in a college where smallness ensures an intimacy among the students.

Washington provides the opportunity to learn of people, to appreciate their wisdom with their foolishness, their dependability and their irresponsibility. We are given a unique experience to observe the drama of change and maturing of ourselves in others. We sweat together, trample each other on the dance floor. We laugh at each other through the foam of our beers . . . and hangovers. We sleep together and pull all nighters. This opportunity will never present itself again.

Washington College unavoidably malajusts its students in the most positive sense of the word, for we, indeed, are not victims of the environment confronting us. Here we have garnered strength to resist the compromise too often demanded of our principles and goals. Tolerance and liberality have been nurtured as we attuned our minds to an insatiable quest for new knowledge and experience. With such provisions, we must now apply a newly forged perspective to the real world.

"We at Washington College must never lose sight of the fact that we are an educational institution. For more than 192 years we have served our clientele well and faithfully. We have established our identity and our abilities. We cannot try to be all things to all people.

... It is the spirit that is important and a very real necessity to that spirit is to attempt by every means possible to show the student how to wonder why, how to set up an hypothesis and how to test the validity of his own conjectures. Everything is not known; in fact the more that is known, the more we realize that there are a great plenty of challenges in the realm of any discipline. Do not accept the trite phrase, the candied capsulized fraudulent labels—ask the responsible 'why' and do it in good spirit.

... If this be the liberal arts tradition at Washington College then we will make the most of it. We are proud of our heritage and confident in our future.

Excerpts from Joseph McLain's
Convocation speech

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Shore Stickmen Shine

By H. Hurtt Deringer

Emotionally spent, physically dead, Washington College's lacrosse team returned to Chestertown Sunday having won respect and prestige with a brilliant performance in the 3rd annual Hero's Tournament.

Playing three games in three days, the Shoremen convincingly dispatched Brown, Ivy League champions, 11-6, then pushed national champion Maryland to the brink in a superhuman effort before bowing, 12-10, and finally, worn-out, lost to Towson, 12-8, in an anti-climactic finale.

Opening Friday against Brown University, Washington spotted the Bruins a goal in the first 19 seconds, then with a precisioned offense cut the Rhode Islanders to ribbons while goaltender Bryan Matthews, fantastic throughout with 16 saves, blanked them for 36 minutes. Tom Regan danced through on dodges twice and John Cheek made it 3-1 at the first period gun. Mike Cordrey, Greg Lane, Jody Haddow and Cheek netted second quarter goals for a 7-1 lead by halftime. Cheek and Tom Mangels fired in third period tallies and Washington College held a dominating 9-1 lead by the end of the quarter. Don Kelly emptied his bench in the fourth period and Brown made the score respectable in the closing minutes.

Saturday saw Washington College (750 students) in against the University of Maryland (20,000 students), winners over Rutgers, 14-4, and reigning national champions. The Terps on cuts and dodges built a 4-0 edge before freshman John Cheek with a frozen-rope gave the Shoremen a goal in a 4-1 first period.

After Maryland opened second period scoring, Mike Cordrey gained Washington's second goal in an extra-man situation. The Terrapins got it back on a fastbreak goal, but then the Shore eleven began to build the momentum they needed on goals by Mangels and Cheek to close at halftime to 7-4.

In Hero's Tournament

Washington College kept it going when Mike Cordrey made it 7-5 to begin the second half. Maryland, however, quickly regained composure with two fast goals, but Washington College did not wilt. Tommy Regan dodged past Mike Parrell for a score, then Cordrey netted his third score of the afternoon with a long, low shot from beyond the restraining line to make it 9-7. Maryland scored again on a loose ball off the crease, but Washington College closed out third period scoring when Jan Rosenthal fed Greg Lane on the crease for a thin 10-8 Maryland edge at the quarter.

John Cheek, fabulous throughout the tourney, netted his third goal of the contest, to pull Washington to within 10-9 early in the final frame. Once again Maryland got it back off an unsettled situation in front of the Shore nets. But the Shoremen drove back, Lane feeding Jody Haddow for an 11-10 tally midway. In the closing minutes Washington College continued to dominate play (they out-shot the Terps 42-33 with 27 shots in the second half), but couldn't hit the nets and the opportunistic Terrapins gained an insurance goal off a broken play close in that made it 12-10. It proved to be an unsurmountable edge that the valiant Shoremen could not overcome.

In defeat Bryan Matthews made 20 saves in a brilliant performance. The close defense of Ray Trucksess, Rich Norris and Jay Elliott battled Maryland's superb attack of O'Meally-Mullen-Dempsey to the hilt and cleared the ball 16 of 25 times. Washington had 41 loose balls to 36 for the Terps with Cordrey, Mangels and Robertson outstanding in that category.

Cheek on attack, Cordrey at midfield and Matthews in the goal were All-Americans this afternoon for Washington College.

Sunday afternoon found Catonsville Community College's picturesque playing facility, windswept and chilly. Washington College, forced to play its third game in 46 hours and its second in 22 hours, met arch-rival Towson State without the service of Tom Regan, who Don Kelly decided to rest due to a wrenched shoulder.

Towson scored first, but two goals by John Cheek, one on which he was knocked cold, and singles by Haddow and Lane gave Washington a 4-3 edge at the gun. Cheek and Dawson Robertson sandwiched goals around a Towson tally to make it 6-4 midway through the second period. It was the Shore high-point.

Midway through the quarter Washington College's close defense fell down in clearing, sliding and backing up, and Shore midfielders, weary from three days of running, couldn't contain Towson, who scored four straight times to take an 8-6 edge at halftime. Towson made it 10-6 in the third as Washington remained flat, before Cheek and Lane brought the Shoremen back to 10-8. In the final frame, however, Washington couldn't put together an offense and Towson made it a 12-8 finale when Shore backing up fell down again.

In defeat Washington gained no goals from high-scoring midfielders Mike Cordrey and Tom Mangels, who had along with Ricky Ricketts and Jan Rosenthal run their hearts out the day before. Haddow, who played well through it all, scored, along with the super vacuum cleaner transfer Dawson Robertson, who departed to cheers with a cut lip that needed stitches. Towson, a fast and quick team, but also dirty, dealt injuries to Cheek, Robertson and Bert Cook. Aging midfielder "Mean Joe" Dougherty, who played six years of club ball before entering Towson along with Larry Stratton, (both City College graduates of 1965), drew a two minute penalty for unnecessary roughness, as did defenseman Wendell Thomas for his vicious shot on John Cheek. Cheek finished the afternoon, however, with four goals in three games, Cheek scored 10 goals and had four assists, and sucked the air and ground dry with his stick. His great performances are best described by those fans that were there. Greg Lane and Mike Cordrey each netted four goals. Lane had five assists. Mangels, Regan and Haddow finished with three goals apiece. Robertson and freshman Andy Cooper, who scored in the fourth period against Brown, closed out the scoring.

Don Kelly, ably assisted by assistant Peter Boggs and conditioner Tom Bowman, nicknamed "Sergeant Carter" by the Shore squad, have built what Towson coach Carl Runk described as "the best team at Washington College in seven years." Runk went on to laud the Shoremen for their "fantastic effort" the day before against national champion Maryland and remarked that he knew that he would meet the same kind of team that took Maryland to the summit, later in the year when the first NCAA College Division Tournament is held.

Buddy Beardmore, humble after Saturday's close shave, praised goaltender Matthews as "among the best in the nation," Washington's attack as "great" and Mike Cordrey as a midfielder who "can play for anybody." Beardmore added, "and just think ' we come to Chestertown next Saturday."

Maryland lost to Maryland Lacrosse Club 8-7, in Sunday's championship game.

Berrigan on resistance: Americans are incapable

Phillip Berrigan, in a pensive moment during last night's lecture, reflects on the resistance movement today.

The crowd shifts in its seats, the William Smith auditorium is filled, part of the audience is standing, anticipating; the lecture is late in beginning. Father Phillip Berrigan, his worn face and sad eyes more eloquent than his consequent verbiage, walks on stage casually attired in turtleneck and brown trousers.

He begins his sales pitch after an introduction by Dr. Kevin McDonnell. The philosophy professor gives a brief synopsis of Berrigan's life as a Jesuit priest, his involvement in the Civil Rights Movement; his political awakening, caused by the Cuban Missile Crises—"It changed the life of Berrigan. He realized that there is something wrong when political leaders play dice with the future of the world"; and his resulting resistance activities.

Berrigan's topic, "What Resistance means Today," is further defined by McDonnell: "What does the movement born in the Sixties mean now that there are no direct confrontations? Now that we're back sucking our pacifiers and not talking. Where is the zeal of the sixties now?"

Berrigan begins his lecture by addressing the audience as "sisters and brothers," and makes no pretense at providing answers. His purpose in speaking, by his own definition, is simply to "inspire some reflection." His showmanship is evident: he removes a set of silverware from his backpocket, explaining that it is a habit acquired in prison. "Now I suppose I could be shaken down for carrying lethal weapons."

It is easy to picture Berrigan in a pulpit, complete with clerical collar. Like some lost prophet, in search of a doctrinal alley in which to channel his rhetoric and devote his life, Berrigan speaks in parables, allusions and quotes from the Bible, and offers the epiphany of inner conviction and strength.

Also a revolutionary, Berrigan speaks in generalizations, fatalistic visions, and simplistic definitions of the "enemy", the "system", and the "cause" as any propagandist does in direct appeal to emotion. He pays lip service to the martyred spokesman of the revolt—Ghandi and King.

Berrigan insists that Americans are crippled by a culture that does not provide its victims with the capacity to say "no" at the proper moment. According to the ex-priest, many Americans are under the "baleful watching of big brother." The great majority of Americans, he contends, are "incapable of dissent", of "recognizing the government as our enemy", of refusing the "goodies" offered to us by our culture and economy.

Quoting Simone Whyte, a Nazi resistance leader, Berrigan defines the "war myth" that Americans accept "lock, stock and barrel": "The acceptance of war as an unavoidable fatality is the root of power politics..." "Berrigan reasons that by our believing that war is not unavoidable, we fall victims to "unscrupulous, demented, over mythological people, like Richard Nixon, who use our names and God's to justify war."

Historically, Berrigan argued, Americans have remained passive, incapable of questioning the immoral, genocidal policies of their government. "When the atomic bombs were dropped on Japanese flesh, did we say Truman was right? That through his neat and antiseptic explanation, our boys lives were justly saved?" The armament bills in Congress are passed with little discussion because, conjectures Berrigan, we do not question war as an "unavoidable fatality." "In the streets of Chestertown, it is unlawful to break the fifth commandment, murder, yet the government continues to kill in Indo-China. Pope John XXIII said: "Governments are held to the same morality as individuals." ...What gave us the right to shirk responsibility in that area?"

Berrigan condemns Americans for their inability "to stake our lives on the pursuit of truth and non-violence... The consequences are tolerable. Americans are fractured by an inability to suffer for a conviction." He concludes: "We are all sucked into the machinery, but there are alternatives. Your responsibility is similar to mine..."

A half hour question and answer period is spotted with few inquires and uncomfortable silences. The "dear Friends" of Father Phillip Berrigan, as he repeatedly addressed the audience, either could not rise intellectually or spiritually to the occasion, or were "inspired to reflection" beyond words. Berrigan verbally shook us by the shoulders, and our response to his occasionally muddled reason and obvious emotional appeal, was to let him walk away from our crowded auditorium unchallenged and unimpressed.

SO & SO RE-ENACTS
THE GARDEN SCENE ON 42nd STREET:

From under the floppy hat
With the brim blown down over one eye,
Her other visible eye
Is sunk in its make-up
And keeping track of his progress
Up the wide street.

When he arrives
She pulls the half eaten apple
Out of her pocket
And they go down in the tall grass of cement.

THE APPLE,
HISTORY
AND MYSELF

WILLIAM TELL:

I have half that name,
One eye, no aim
And I don't like children,

You have never heard of me.

A MISSED CHANCE TO DISCOVER GRAVITY:

Eating a ham and cheese sandwich
When the apple drops I remark,

Man's soul is leaden, it rises to meet nothing.

SOME CIDER FOR THE SOLDIER:

Handing the sweaty soldier
The cup of cider

with the ice cubes melting
around slivers of glass

The small oriental boy
Is pocketing the change
And moving off into the crowd.

THE APPLE OF YOUR PAST:

The apple of your past
Is that red sphere your friends
Have learned not to force
Down your throat.

THE APPLE IN YOUR FUTURE:

The apple in your future
Is the apple you cannot eat.

Still, you pray for it to arrive
It does
And we stare down at it

Toothless and with our lips
That sag back in a wet mouth
And quiver a little,
Almost as if they are
Trying to kiss themselves
Lightly.

We learn to crack it apart
And live on the seeds.
